Just before the hour named, officer Hob-

At this moment the other man, who had remained silent during this conversation, stepped up and said to his companion:

Come on, George, let's go"; but instead of leaving, and without another word, the man addressed as George raised his arm, and before Hobson was aware of what he was going to do, fired a pistol directly in his face.

The officer did not fall, but was so entirely stunned by the suddenness of the attack that for an instant he did nothing. The men immediately ran off up Governor street. Mr.

Hobson, recovering himself, shouted "murder" several times, and commenced rapping

The shot and the subsequent cries were heard by several gentlemen near the Ballard

House, and they hastened up the street in northeast corner of Franklin and Thirteenth the Coleman trial: "The court doth certify that the examination of Colonel Joseph Mayo, Jr., was con-tinued at intervals through Monday and Tuesday, March 28d and March 24th; that there was nothing in his manner or demeanor during the whole trial that attracted any attention, except as hereafter stated: that his mind was perfectly clear, his appreciation of the interrogatories perfect, his answers clear and intelligent and framed in language unusually accurate and succinct giving a better and clearer idea of the complications as to which he deposed than any other witness in the case; that his manner was as usual, except that it was somewhat subdued; that it was evident that he was during the trial drinking deeply, but that this did not affect either his mind or his memory, which were clear and accurate; that in the commencement of the examination. Colonel Mayo being upon the stand, it was necessary, in the order of proof, to supersede him temporarily by General Asa Rogers, the Second Auditor, who was called to testify to portions of transactions which related to his office, thus introducing some confusion in the examination, the questions sometimes being directed to one witness and sometimes to another, the witnesses being the direction of the alarm. MEETING OF THE STATE GRANGE.

THIRD DAY. The Grange met in Virginia Hall at 10 clock A. M. yesterday, the Master, J. W. White, presiding. The greater part of the morning session was occupied in hearing and disposing of reports from the various committees appointed under the rules. A great deal of routine business, uninteresting to outsiders, was thus disposed of. The proposed amendments to and alterations of the constitution proposed at the last session of the National Grange, and sent down to the several State Granges for ratification or rejection, were considered and satisfactorily disposed of. It is believed that these changes in the constitution will add greatly to the benefits to be derived from a much more effectual in its designs and operations, and thus add largely to its membership and sphere of usefulness. Major R. V. Gaines, chairman of the State

Executive Committee, made a report as to their actions and purposes, and what mode of relief to the farmers had been adopted and the good already accomplished in the matter of the purchase of supplies, fertilizers, implements, &c.

Evening Session. The Grange convened at 71 o'clock, and was opened by the master. Reports from standing committees were introduced and acted on. Amongst other reports which were received and adopted was the following from the Committee on

TRANSPORTATION AND COOPERATION in regard to an investigation as to "what action may be necessary to secure cheap and rapid transportation from Norfolk and Portsmouth to all points North." The committee report that they "have had the same under consideration, and beg leave to report a recommendation that a special committee of five be appointed to consider the subject above referred to it, and to investigate the matter and report to the State Grange at the next annual meeting some plan by which cheap and rapid transportation from Norfolk and Portsmouth to all points North may be secured."

A great number of resolutions have been referred to the various committees, and by reason of this several of them have thus far been unable to sufficiently consider and digest them as to be able to report upon them. At 11 o'clock the Grange adjourned until the usual hour to-day.

TAX ON SAMPLE-MERCHANTS .- In the House of Delegates yesterday, on motion of Mr. Hoeninger, of Henrico, the general tax bill was amended so as to prohibit counties, cities, and towns from levying or collecting any tax on sample-merchants.
